A step-by-step guide to planning, training, movement, nutrition, and recovery for backpackers and thru-hikers of all levels

- The perfect guide for anyone considering the PCT, AT, CDT, JMT, or other long-distance hikes
- Tips based on the authors' extensive on-the-ground experiences
- Interest in hiking and long-distance trails continues to boom

In Adventure Ready, renowned hikers Katie “Salty” Gerber and Heather “Anish” Anderson take what they’ve learned both on the trail and through teaching their online Adventure Ready classes to a new level: preparing long-distance hikers for all the challenges—physical, emotional, and mental—they may encounter while on the trail for weeks or months. This clear and comprehensive guide sets backpackers up for success with detailed information about everything from the basics of gear selection, navigation, safety, and trip planning to nutritional and physical preparation and body resiliency to how to readjust after returning home. Worksheets and checklists make it easy to stay on top of all the planning a long-distance hike requires, while thoughtful prompts to address the “Why” of the adventure help keep hikers motivated.

Adventure Ready empowers both men and women to create goals, face challenges, and be stronger and smarter on the trail.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

KATIE GERBER is a certified holistic health and nutrition coach, wilderness instructor, guide, and writer. She is a seasoned long-distance hiker who has logged thousands of miles on trails and routes including the CDT, the PCT, the Colorado Trail, and the Oregon Desert Trail. She lives and adventures in the mountains of Colorado.

ADAM LINT

National Geographic Adventurer of the Year, HEATHER ANDERSON is the first woman to complete a Calendar Year Triple Crown, hiking the AT, PCT, and CDT in 2018. She holds the overall self-supported Fastest Known Time (FKT) on the PCT, the AT, and the Arizona Trail. She is the author of Thirst and Mud, Rocks, Blazes. Anderson divides her time between the East and the mountains of the West.

44 GEAR SELECTION

knee-high gaiters were swapped out for low-cut trail runners, shorts, and a sun umbrella!

RESUPPLY AND WATER ACCESS FREQUENCY

Resupply frequency (and type of resupply available) will primarily influence your pack type and size, as well as your choice of food preparation. As you develop your strategy for resupplying, you will get a stronger sense of the capacity requirements of your backpack. A good rule of thumb is to choose the pack that will work for 95 percent of the projected resupplies. It's usually not worth it to carry a lot of empty backpack most of the time when you can just strap bags of chips or a bear canister onto the outside of a smaller pack for the few days that space is a concern.

Your access to water is also a determining factor for pack capacity. On very dry trails such as the Arizona Trail, you may need to carry the same capacity backpack you use for longer food-carry hikes, even if you have shorter resupply intervals. Water takes up a lot of space inside your backpack, in addition to being heavy. In the gear-list portion of this chapter, we share our specific gear choices and notes on why we chose some of them.

EVALUATING, CHOOSING, AND TESTING GEAR

The best method for evaluating whether a particular piece of gear works for you is to use it in the field. Nothing is more telling than a few days

Katie Tip

I began my first long-distance hike with a thrifted external-frame backpack, a 4-pound sleeping bag, and several pieces of borrowed gear. My pack weighed 55 pounds! Slogging up and down those mountains in the first 30 miles to Neel Gap on the AT had me questioning whether I could really sustain that level of effort for hundreds of miles. My shoulders were killing me, and an old tendinitis injury in my knees flared up. When I hobbled into Mountain Crossings, the outfitter conveniently located right on the AT, I was more than ready to invest in lightweight gear! By swapping out my big three and mailing several items home, I hiked out with a 20-pound pack, feeling lighter—physically and mentally—about what lay ahead.

on trail with an article of clothing or gear item. Things that are comfortable in the store can quickly become loathed when you're sweating up a major climb. I (Heather) have dealt with more blisters than I care to admit due to shoes and boots that fit well in the store but became painfully small as soon as I was carrying a full pack and trail pronation set in!

Especially if you're new to backpacking, or if you're using a new item for the first time, it's best to test your gear before your trip. Do this in a low-stakes environment, such as your backyard or a local park. Take a few shakeout hikes, where you mimic expected trip conditions as closely as possible. Pack all the items you plan to carry on your trip. Practice packing your pack. Get used to adjusting it and carrying it with a load. Pay attention to how it feels and if there are any irritating spots. Even if you're a seasoned backpacker, whenever possible, test new gear before using it in the field.

Unfortunately, advance testing isn't always feasible, and for that reason we cover the major considerations below. How much importance to place on any one of these factors is an individual decision. Simply because an item is the lightest, most expensive, or most popular, that doesn't

Heather Tip

While I am just on the fringe of ultralight (my base weight is 9 to 12 pounds), the concept of choosing the lightest piece that will function for me is prevalent in my decision-making. This helps ensure that my pack weight doesn't swell out of control (except with food!).

Anthology featuring both famous and untold stories from the female trailblazers of Yosemite climbing

- Foreword by Mari Gingery
- Features stories from nearly 40 contributors, including notable climbers
- Author is deeply connected with the Valley community through her work with Yosemite Search and Rescue

Women have always been at the center of Yosemite—climbing, crafting equipment, and establishing new routes. In Valley of Giants, editor and climber Lauren DeLaunay Miller highlights journal excerpts, original essays, interviews, archival materials, and memorable firsts that span the past century of climbing in the Valley.

These stories range widely in perspective and capture the breadth of their experiences and accomplishments—from Bea Vogel who forged her own pitons to Molly Higgins who participated in the first all-female ascent of the Nose on El Capitan to Liz Robbins who established routes in Yosemite Valley during the Golden Age, plus astonishing Stonemasters like Lynn Hill, as well as many other notable climbers, including Steph Davis, Kate Rutherford, Beth Rodden, Chelsea Griffie, Libby Sauter, and more.

Organized into five parts representing distinct eras in Yosemite climbing history, this anthology captures a range of stories from heartbreaking losses to soaring joys, trip reports of significant ascents to moments that convey the larger essence of the Valley—and what it means to call this iconic place “home.”

EXCERPT FROM "THE SHIELD"

by Lynn Hill

After two days on the wall, we became accustomed to living in a reality where survival required us to concentrate on each move and to evaluate the consequences of every action, whether it was hammering in a piton or clipping ourselves into our batlike hanging bivouacs. Night was a precious time when we could relax, eat, drink, and gaze up at the stars.

On the fourth day Mari led us up to the headwall. The pitch she followed to get us there was dubbed the Shield Roof, and it was indeed a giant of a roof. Hanging upside down under the roof to place each piece of gear, she dangled in her aid ladders, whacking in pitons and placing nuts whenever possible. Finally shouting down through the afternoon wind that blew our hanging rope in a swirling dance, she let me know that she was off belay. I jumared up while removing a few precarious-looking copperhead placements she had hammered in.

When I pulled around from the underside of the ceiling and joined Mari at the lip of the roof and at the start of the headwall, I found that we were poised in an outrageous position. Under our feet, there was nothing but air. Above us rose 1,000 feet of smooth, overhanging orange granite. To either side of us the walls curved around out of sight. We seemed to be suspended on the edge of the world, and the two of us and our pig (haul bag full of equipment, food, and water) hung from three steel bolts the length, yet not quite the thickness, of a half-smoked cigarette. Feeling vulnerable, I instinctively checked the knot at my waist, the only thing securing me to the anchor.

We had reached the point of no return. It would be impossible to rappel down from here. It was now summit or bust.

Years later, after I had done the first free ascent of the Nose, and then again in one day, I had read with some chagrin in Galen Rowell's The Vertical World of Yosemite, "Women are conspicuously absent from the climbs in this book. I have no apology to make here because it is not my place to change history. There simply were no major first ascents in Yosemite done by women during the formative years of the sport."

Barb Eastman (pictured) and Molly Higgins were the first all-female team to climb the Nose on El Capitan in Yosemite National Park. Higgins's story of their climb is featured in the anthology.

MOLLY HIGGINS

Our sport back then was directed by a fraternity of men, and there was little encouragement or, frankly, inclination for women to participate. Yet women climbers were out there. There were women such as Beverly Johnson before me, who had done the first ascent of a big-wall route on El Capitan with Charlie Porter, the same person who also did the first ascent of the Shield. The fact that this woman who had done the first ascent of a big-wall route in Yosemite back then was not given credit or even an acknowledgment during those times was disgraceful to me. It was very important for me and others to know that there were other women out there who shared a passion for climbing and adventure.

A natural athlete, Lynn Hill pushed the limits of sport climbing and achieved success on the world competition climbing stage before returning to Yosemite to complete the first free ascent and the first free one-day ascent of the Nose on El Capitan, feats that changed the definition of what's possible in rock climbing.

CAMPFIRE STORIES DECK—FOR KIDS!

Card Game/Nature/Storytelling | Rights: World

Kid-friendly, create-a-story deck with prompts to inspire fun and games, imagination, and colorful campfire memories for the entire family

- For ages 5 and up
- 50 game cards divided into two sets: 25 characters (adjective + noun) and 25 actions (verb + object and/or adverb)
- Individually illustrated cards, including 25 animal heroes

Firmly grounded in the natural world, the fun and furry prompts in Campfire Stories Deck—For Kids! spark children's imaginations for storytelling adventures. To play, young players pick one card from each set and then use the prompts to make up a story. Extra cards introduce families to the deck, provide storytelling tips to help engage children, and describe different ways family and friends can play the game, including a collaborative approach in which the entire group contributes to a story.

With this deck in hand, kids of all ages can gather around the campfire and light up their outdoor imaginations!

An accessible and stunning celebration of the often unnoticed wonders overhead

- Full-color photography and illustrations
- Details seasonal events from Nor'easters and northern lights to fire whirls and tornadoes
- Sidebars dive into fascinating facts, quirky phenomena, historic weather events, myths, and more

Written by self-professed weather geek Dennis Mersereau, The Skies Above inspires equal parts amazement and curiosity. Accessible science, illuminating illustrations, and stunning photography bring the meteorological world to life. From basics such as weather fronts and types of precipitation to more unusual occurrences like polar vortexes, meteor showers, solar eclipses, and the spectacular mammatus clouds that signify a supercell thunderstorm, Mersereau tracks key phenomena across the seasons and demystifies celestial events visible to the naked eye but still enigmatic to most. He also delves into how climate change affects weather, forecasts, and other events such as devastating wildfires and historic hurricanes.

The Skies Above provides readers with a deeper understanding of the processes and events that fill our skies, which not only soothes the anxiety produced by raucous storms, but instills a stronger and more meaningful appreciation of the beauty of days both stormy and calm.

PADDLE A CANOE

THE RHYTHM OF CANOEING SETTLES
THE MIND AND ENLIVENS THE SPIRIT

Find tranquility on the water

HERE ARE SOME THINGS you might see in a wetland from a canoe: turtles sunning themselves on a log, the intricate construction of a beaver dam, Mallards nibbling at your fingers, a motionless Green Heron stalking her prey. Get up close and personal with aquatic wildlife from the unique perspective of being on the water.

Dip your paddle in the waters of Native history. The Coast Salish people were superb mariners and carved elegant dugout canoes, each from a single western red cedar tree. Their ornate boats, embellished with symbolic characters like the orca or raven, ranged in size from small watercraft to seaworthy vessels as long as 70 feet. They deftly navigated local waterways in pursuit of salmon runs, trade, war, and travel to potlatches. Pacific Northwest Coast peoples like the Salish and Haida favored canoes over the sea kayaks used by Arctic Indigenous peoples; what canoes lacked in cover from the elements, they made up for in their ease of loading both supplies and people.

A good rule of thumb for where to launch a canoe is to stick to calm freshwater. For the average paddler, the open saltwater of Puget Sound with its strong currents and tides is better suited to kayaks. Start with half-day paddles, then work your way up to overnight canoe camping trips.

THE BASICS OF PADDLING A CANOE

Canoeing is easy to learn, though sustained paddling requires some core strength and stamina. Start with short outings to master the basic techniques for efficient, comfortable paddling. Always wear a life jacket; you want a snug fit. Practice getting in and out of the canoe when you're on shore and it is in water, grasping the gunwale (the canoe's top edge) to stay steady and keep a low center of gravity. Hold the paddle with the grip in one hand and the shaft in the other, arms about shoulder-width apart. You're forming a box with your paddle, two arms and chest; maintain this box while you paddle and keep your arms in your line of sight as they line up each stroke.

This is key, because the power for each stroke comes from your torso rotation, not your arms. For the basic forward stroke, the upper body twists into a wind-up, then unwinds as you draw your paddle through the water, keeping the shaft vertical. Use short strokes, take the paddle out of the water just as it passes your hip, and feather the blade in the recovery phase so it slices the air instead of catching it. Meanwhile, your lower body helps to stabilize the canoe. Other fundamental strokes to learn are the draw stroke to move the boat sideways, and the j stroke for steering. When riding tandem, paddle on opposite sides and switch at the same time. The person in front provides most of the power and the person in back steers.

WHERE TO GO

The first two destinations have a lively onsite for hourly canoe rentals, and the paddling is perfect for beginners. As you graduate to mountain lakes and canoe camping, you'll need your own boat, which can be securely tied upside-down to the roof rack on your car for transport. Canoes may be made of fiberglass, aluminum, plastic, or wood, and start around $700 new. Rent a canoe for a night rate at your local outdoor store.

To the north is a sprawling wetland teeming with bird life, the Union Bay Natural Area. To the south is another wetland, the Washington Park Arboretum. Fit in both if you have time, otherwise paddle south around Marsh Island and under the 520 Bridge to explore the marshes on the arboretum's edge along Foster Island and into Duck Bay. Skirt alongside lawns of lily pads where Pied-billed Grebes build their floating nests, safely protected on the water from predators. Most paddlers through the arboretum spot several species of ducks, herons, turtles, and osprey and bald eagles overhead. If you're lucky, you might see a shy muskrat or a pair of fantastically beautiful Wood Ducks who use the nest boxes placed here for them. Note: Boat access to a small portion of the arboretum's wetlands is limited due

Start at Enatai Beach Park's boathouse where REI rents canoes by the hour, or meet up with city naturalists here for a half-day guided canoe trip into Mercer Slough on weekend mornings, May–September. Paddle east hugging the shoreline, then under the concrete ribbons of I-90 into the mouth of Mercer Slough, a lush wetland totaling 320 acres and bisected vertically by a canal over 2 miles long. Poke your way up the marshy canal, serenaded by the Marsh Wren's percussive trills. Herons, rails, and bitterns love this reedy habitat. Got your own canoe? There's a put-in at the Swaylocken Boat Launch (3000 Bellevue Way SE) on the southern shore of the canal.

NORTH CASCADES NATIONAL PARK

Diablo Lake, Highway 20 east of Marblemount, nps.gov/noca, (360) 854-7200

The brilliant water of Diablo Lake owes its surreal hue to glacial runoff full of pulverized rock that contains the mineral olivine, painting the lake a vibrant jade on sunny days. On a clear morning, backdropped by craggy Cascade peaks bejeweled with glaciers, this reservoir is probably the most scenic place you could paddle a canoe in the whole state. Head to Colonial Creek Campground, where you'll find a dock from which to launch your boat and a place to pitch your tent. The primo experience here is to park in the lot, then load all that camping gear into your canoe, and paddle up the lake for an hour or so to one of the national park's three scenic, private boat-in campgrounds. Each has a tent pad, privy, bear box, picnic table, and campfire ring. Swing by the ranger station in Marblemount to get a free backcountry camping permit. To paddle a multiday camping trip in this area, Ross Lake Resort provides portage service for small boats for a fee. North Cascades Institute leads outings in the lake in an eighteen-person Salish-style canoe.

MORE CANOE CAMPING TRIPS

Potholes State Park, Moses Lake. Ice age floods carved depressions in the earth here, then a dam filled them up. What remains is a huge desert oasis—hundreds of small islands in a shallow sea with its own soundtrack, the flapping wings of shorebirds and rusty hinge Carry your canoe to camp, or use the vehicle-accessible boat launch further up the road and paddle to the marshy, wildlife-rich western shore for sublime mountain paddling.

Lake Ozette, Olympic National Park. Launch from the ranger station boat ramp and hug the western shoreline of the lake as you paddle south about 4 miles, around Shafer's Point and into Erickson's Bay and the park's only boat-in campground.

Triumphs, terrors, and tales stretching 2,650 miles from Mexico to Canada—stories from today's Pacific Crest Trail

- Contributors include Cheryl Strayed, Carrot Quinn, Barney "Scout" Mann, Aspen Matis, Nicholas Kristof, Heather Anderson, Will "Akuna" Robinson, and many more
- Shares new stories from the last decade to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the original PCT Readers
- Sidebars address some of the issues affecting the PCT

What's it like to be a trail angel and can romance truly blossom from first meeting to marriage on the Pacific Crest Trail? How do trail names get bestowed and what does it mean when you find yourself roaring back at a mountain lion? How have climate change, technology, and the sheer number of hikers affected life on the PCT?

Find the answers to all these questions, and so many more, in the diverse writings gathered in Crossing Paths, an anthology of stories and poems written by PCT hikers. Reflecting the contributors' rich and varied individual experiences, this collection includes both ordinary and extraordinary experiences, from dodging lightning strikes on an exposed ridge south of Sonora Pass or surviving early fall snowstorms in the Cascades, to deeply personal walks-as-therapy following military service or cancer treatment. The selection represents geographic, gender, ethnic, and age diversity, and strives to reflect the totality and depth of life on the trail.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Growing up in the wilds of Kansas, REES HUGHES found the lure of the mountains irresistible, eventually settling in Northern California's Klamath Knot. Although he has hiked all over the world, the Pacific Crest Trail has been his true love for more than 40 years. The author of a popular hiking guide, Hiking Humboldt, Rees also serves on the board of the Bigfoot Trail Alliance and coordinates a local Volunteer Trail Stewards program.

After a 40-year career that included a focus on students with special needs, HOWARD SHAPIRO retired from full-time teaching in 2016. He has spent more than four decades hiking the Pacific Crest Trail and recently completed all sections. In addition to spending countless hours in the North Cascades near his home, Howard has hiked extensively in Europe, Nepal, Canada, and elsewhere. He joined the editorial team for The Pacific Crest Trailside Reader website in 2017.

CLEANSING DIRT

by Crystal Gail "The Giver" Welcome

Although the lack of people of color walking the PCT has long been an issue, only recently has the inequity come into the consciousness of the broader PCT community.

I began my hike on April 5, 2016. Along the journey, I met hikers from all over the world, though most were from the United States. Most were experienced, with years of backcountry knowledge, with the means to take time off work, and almost all were white. I did not meet a single Black hiker on my journey. I have often heard white outdoorsmen say that there is no racism on the trail. As I grapple with this, I question why didn't I see a single other Black person.

In the trail towns, I would have interactions with townsfolk who were pleasant enough. But I never felt the hiker welcome that other hikers seemingly received. They would socialize freely and had no need to declare themselves hikers, while I usually had to explain my reason for being in town. Once in Big Bear Lake, a guy asked me where I was hiking from. When I replied "the Mexican border," he told me, "Wow, you speak English good" (with no sense of irony), adding, "I'm glad you made it across the border safely."

I also met some really amazing folks on the trail. For example, there were three hikers from Vermont who I spent four days hiking alongside. We spent an entire day lost together, heading south during a trail closure. We hitchhiked together and had meals together. One evening, out of nowhere, it snowed. I was grateful for them. At the time, I was clueless about how to stay warm—they built a campfire that evening. And when we finally said our good-byes, they gave me Vermont maple syrup as a parting gift. We have remained friends since.

Being a solo hiker meant that even though I met people and sometimes spent time with them, I was often alone with Nature. And this was the truly amazing aspect of my trek. When I was lost, I never fretted, because I trusted that she wouldn't lead me astray. When I felt I was running low on water, I would listen for the birds—whenever I heard them, I knew water was nearby. I would watch the clouds for evidence of shifts in weather. Instinctively, I knew the earth and was connected to the earth.

The dirt was cleansing. Solo hiking felt natural, as if I had been backpacking my entire life. I understood I was safe among all things natural. The only thing that could harm me was the humans, especially the ones that didn't look like me.

One afternoon while I was headed to a Mohave campsite, I was confronted by a rattlesnake. I knew little about how to approach a rattlesnake. I was in the middle of a ridge that I couldn't hike up or down. I didn't want to backtrack, so my only option was to forge ahead. I thought about how I would feel if I were sleeping in my home and someone came in and woke me up. It might end in tragedy, especially with me as a Black woman. I knew I couldn't awaken this snake, so I opted to wait it out. Time passed, and the snake didn't wake up. I was familiar with waiting, from my experiences of growing up without: waiting for paychecks, for new shoes or new clothes. Out of respect, I decided to turn around, figuring it was a sign that I wasn't meant to pass. As I was walking back toward the trailhead, two men came along with two llamas. They reminded me of the wise men in biblical times. They offered to help, and, as I held on to the llamas, they used my hiking poles to push the snake off the trail so we all could pass. I listened as the snake hissed in fear and anger. That night in my tent I felt the anguish of the snake. I cried—major, body-shaking sobbing that racked my body, each wail coming in a wave, and with every sob I let out a whimper. Even though the snake was not killed, we had disrupted the balance in Nature, and she cried with me. I think it may have rained twice during my nearly eight-week trek, and this was one of those times. As I cried, the rain beat against my tent. But the next morning I was greeted by the sun. I took this as a sign of forgiveness. I understood that we are all co-creators of the earth. Any harm that we do to others comes back onto us.

ALASKA ADVENTURE 55 WAYS

Southcentral Wilderness Explorations

JOHN WOLFE JR. AND REBECCA WOLFE
FOREWORD BY HELEN D. NIENHUESER

304 pages | 6¼ x 8 | $24.95 | paperback
100 color photographs | 56 maps
ISBN 978-1-68051-542-8 | ebook 978-1-68051-543-5
Guidebook/Alaska/Outdoors | Rights: World

Alaska's most beloved guidebook, wholly revised and reimagined

- Features hiking, skiing, paddling, biking, and more
- New and substantially revised trips with new full-color photos and maps throughout
- Emphasis on traverses and loop trips for both summer and winter, with family-friendly options
- Readily accessible trips—no highly technical skills or big budgets required

The classic guide known as 55 Ways to the Wilderness in Southcentral Alaska has undergone a robust reboot. Alaska Adventure 55 Ways covers a diverse range of activities for year-round fun, from quick day trips to adventures up to a week or longer, including canoe trails, wilderness cabins, easy summits, forest walks, cross-country ski routes, mountain biking, wild skating, and more.

John Wolfe Jr. and Rebecca Wolfe, a father-daughter team, present activities spanning Southcentral Alaska. The guide features trips on the Kenai Peninsula and throughout the Anchorage front range, Matanuska and Susitna Valleys, and Copper River basin, taking in Chugach and Denali State Parks, Chugach National Forest, Kenai Fjords and Wrangell–St. Elias National Parks, several wildlife refuges, and portions of the Iditarod National Historic Trail. This guide appeals to all ages, with options that add up to more than 100 “ways” to adventure.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

ANNE RAUP

Lifelong Anchorage resident JOHN WOLFE JR. studied at Middlebury College in Vermont before returning to Alaska and founding the nonprofit Alaska Huts Association. John became coauthor of 55 Ways to the Wilderness with his mother, Helen Nienhueser, in 1994. Although he has guided on Denali, John loves the simple peak scrambles of the Chugach Mountains best.

GRETCHEN NELSON

REBECCA WOLFE has been hiking in Southcentral Alaska since childhood. She earned a bachelor's degree from Smith College and a master's of architecture from Montana State University. Becca enjoys finding new ways to experience the Alaska backcountry on skis and by bike, though backpacking in the mountains is when she feels most at home. She splits her time between Mojave, California, and Anchorage, Alaska.

Green Trails Maps available in digital format from Avenza Maps at avenzamaps.com

- More than 150 backcountry maps for Western states
- Trails on each map individually hiked and recorded with GPS for accuracy
- Relied upon for more than 50 years by hikers, climbers, backpackers, backcountry skiers, snowshoers, and more

As every experienced backcountry adventurer knows, possessing solid tools for navigation is one of the Ten Essentials for a safe adventure. There are, of course, many technological options out there, but to truly be prepared there's really nothing better than a printed map—and there's absolutely no better map than a color topographic Green Trails Map. Fully vetted and high quality, Green Trails Maps are not only useful for trip planning but will keep backcountry travelers on track, long after the batteries have died on other navigational devices.

Each map includes:

- Trails coded for hikers only, as well as mountain bikers, horses, skiers, and snowmobilers
- Icons for parking and picnic areas, tent camping and RV spaces, bathrooms and backcountry toilets, points of interest, waterfalls, springs, and gates
- Dot-to-dot trail distances and elevation change, contour intervals, adjacent map numbers, and permits required
- Land designations: national and state parks, national forest, wilderness, DNR land, private land, tribal land, and others

A hiking guide for exploring the remote corners and high country of Colorado

- 70 hikes throughout Colorado's nine most prominent mountain ranges
- Each hike highlights a lake destination and an extra route such as a peak climb or high-ridge traverse
- Tips for the trail, including gear and equipment, climbing classifications, weather and climate, and safety considerations

This book is for anyone who seeks out the Colorado high-country hiking and climbing experience. Dr. Jon Kedrowski has selected and outlined some of his favorite hikes to backcountry lakes (including places to swim in summer or ice skate in winter!). Some hikes are loops, meaning you will be able to hike to a lake or series of lakes and return to the trailhead by a different trail. An extra route—such as climbing a peak or following a high-ridge traverse from peak to peak—is also suggested.

Have you ever sat down for a snack break at a high mountain lake and wondered, “Can that peak be climbed?” Or, “I wonder if it’s possible to traverse that ridge?” This book answers those questions. “Dr. Jon’s Extra Credit” sections dish out even more options for creating your own adventures. Tap into your desire to be an explorer: grab this guidebook and a map and let your imagination run wild. Enjoy making your own adventures into the remote corners of Colorado!

The “bible” of AT hiking for almost a half-century, updated every year

- Essential for basic planning of any AT hike
- Culled from all 11 AT guidebooks
- Reflects all major changes from the previous 12 months

Now in its 44th edition, the Appalachian Trail Data Book officially documents all key details of the AT from Maine to Georgia. Sometimes termed “the bible of AT hiking” because of its use in essential hike planning, each year’s Data Book consolidates the most important information from 11 detailed official guidebooks into a lightweight table of distances between major Appalachian Trail shelters, road-crossings, and features. It is divided according to the guidebook volumes and updated each December to account for trail relocations, new (or removed) shelters, and other changes. In addition to codes for lodging, food, water, and other essentials, the Data Book is keyed to both the individual guidebook sections and to the separate maps.

DANIEL D. CHAZIN, an attorney and longtime volunteer/editor with the New York–New Jersey Trail Conference, has been the editor of the annual Appalachian Trail Data Book since 1983. He also is the editor of the Appalachian Trail Guide to New York–New Jersey and chair of the publications committee of the NY-NJ Trail Conference.

A thoroughly researched guide by long-distance hikers for long-distance hikers

- Professional elevation profiles to show the day ahead
- Landmark-by-landmark tables for at-a-glance information
- Town maps indicate food and lodging

The Appalachian Trail Conservancy and the Appalachian Long Distance Hikers Association collaborate each year on a guide designed for potential thru-hikers who want the basic information for a five- to six-month trek in the woods, at a reasonable price, but also want the adventure of discovering the extras for themselves. A favorite for 28 years of section-hikers and dreamers alike, it is still the only such guide written by volunteers and all the proceeds are returned to the AT by these two nonprofits. Fact-checking research is done by more than two dozen thru-hiker volunteers in 14 states, backed by the first-hand information of the trail’s volunteer and staff maintainers and managers. Includes gear manufacturers’ toll-free numbers, post office hours, and much more.

APPALACHIAN LONG DISTANCE HIKERS ASSOCIATION is an organization of past, present, and future hikers of the Appalachian Trail. It was formed in 1981 by previous thru-hikers but soon become a “users group” for backpackers and hikers of all the US scenic trails and major hiking paths abroad. ALDHA meets annually for a three-day festival and also engages in volunteer projects, such as shelter work trips and hostel repairs. Robert Sylvester leads a team of 25 volunteer field editors who contribute annual updates for the Companion.

DELMARVA BICYCLE ROUTE

Section 1: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to Felton, Delaware (104 mi.)

ISBN 978-1-7322847-0-8

Section 2: Felton, Delaware to Currituck, North Carolina (270 mi.)

ISBN 978-1-7322847-1-5

Pedal past historic towns, productive farmlands, quaint coastal villages, and sun-soaked beaches along the Eastern Seaboard.

- The 372-mile Delmarva Bicycle Route connects Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to Currituck, North Carolina along the east side of the peninsula traveling along the Delaware Bay, and the Atlantic Ocean beaches of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia.
- As a coastal alternative or to create a loop, the route can be connected to the Atlantic Coast Route at Philadelphia or Currituck.
- The 194-mile Delmarva Chesapeake Option departs the main route at St. Georges, and reconnects near Pocomoke City traveling through the coastal towns of Maryland along the Chesapeake Bay.

APPALACHIAN TRAIL CONSERVANCY

If you're planning to hike the AT, whether a section or the entire route, then these are the guides you need. Updated every five to ten years, each guide is packaged in a resealable plastic bag and includes up to seven sheets of maps.

The books feature detailed trail descriptions, water sources, shelter and camping sites, road access directions, points of interest, and background information.

All guides have unidirectional trail descriptions with additional natural and cultural history information for each section.

The maps are water- and tear-resistant topographic maps with elevation profiles and major side trails.

REGIONAL INDEX

Following is an index of titles sorted by region. We've indexed guidebooks here to make it easy to find the ones that are near you. Also included are some narrative adventures, because it's always fun to read stories that took place near where you live or in a faraway place you're interested in. A little more than half our catalog can be organized regionally. But don't forget about all those sports instructionals, general lifestyle topics, and wild, sweet, and romantic tales that aren't in this index. You need to browse through the pages here to find those treasures or, if you know the title, you can find them in the Title Index.
